

CLIFF

Therapeutic Community

According to the 2000 National Household Survey on Drug Abuse, approximately 8.8 million people have tried Methamphetamine at some point in their lives. While Methamphetamine use originally impacted primarily the West and Southwest, the problems have spread to both rural and urban areas of the Midwest. Indiana has not been immune. Methamphetamine production, distribution, and use in Indiana have reached epidemic proportion. Managing the Methamphetamine problem in Indiana requires aggressive approaches from a variety of fronts. Attacking one aspect of the Methamphetamine problem is not sufficient. Many of the current approaches to managing the Methamphetamine epidemic have relied solely on law enforcement. While law enforcement agencies continue to actively confront the issue, efforts must be expanded in other realms.

As law enforcement agencies continue to expand their efforts in controlling the production and distribution of Methamphetamine, an increasing number of offenders are entering the criminal justice system in need of treatment for Methamphetamine abuse or dependence. In an effort to more actively manage this population, the Department of Correction has developed and implemented a specialized intensive substance abuse treatment program for incarcerated offenders that are Methamphetamine abusers. This is a program located at the Miami Correctional Facility.

Welcome to the

C.L.I.F.F. Community

The Department of Correction has designed several cognitive behavioral interventions to help treat offenders. I am proud to announce the opening of the “Clean Lifestyle is Freedom Forever” (CLIFF) program and treatment unit at the Miami Correctional Facility.

Effective prevention begins with an assessment of the specific nature of the drug problem within the local community and adapting the program accordingly. Our CLIFF program assists offenders in recovery from Methamphetamine and all other associated drug addictions. The unit provides offenders with a positive environment in which they learn the social and cognitive skills to successfully stay out of the criminal justice system. I am confident that our professionally-trained staff will offer the best environment to help the offenders learn to live in recovery.

My goal is to develop a Meth-Free Indiana strategy for offenders in our system. This means we offer a broad range of treatment solutions for our participants before they re-enter the community.
